

THE SENATORIAL CHECKER BOARD.

How New and Old Senators Have Pared in the Shuffle for Seats.

GOVERNOR EARLY TO SET NEXT TO MR. BRICE—MR. WARREN'S EARLY PROMPTED MR. INGLE—SENATORS WHO MOVE DOWN WITHIN RANGE OF THE VICE PRESIDENT'S SEAT.

Since the almost-forgotten days when Capt. Isaac Bassett graduated as a page under the watchful care and penetrating vision of Daniel Webster there have not been so many changes of seats in the Senate as are arranged to take effect when the Fifty-first Congress convenes a thing of life and activity. December, 1891, is some months away, but the average statesman believes in "taking time by the padlock," as Albert Smith used to put it. If there is any virtue in a front seat in the political syndicate it will never be found at the rear and what ever may be had for the asking is his to a certainty. Ordinarily there are never more than two or three seating changes to be made at the commencement of each session, but next session is not going to be an exception, for so many of those who were not lost in the shuffle are preparing to secure the choicest available locations.

MR. WOLCOTT GOES TO THE FRONT. Under the present plan, when Senator Wolcott wants to make a few of his straight-from-the-shoulder remarks, he has to address the Senate from a seat in the rear row. After next session opens up he will occupy the rear row, and he will break up the immediate partnership which exists between Senator Furbush and the junior Senator from Colorado. They will be sitting side by side in the second row, and Senator Furbush will be the one to whom Senator Wolcott will be addressing his remarks. Mr. Warren is to take Mr. Ingle's place. One of the best seats in the chamber is No. 3 in the second row, now the property of Senator Ingalls. After the 4th of March Mr. Ingalls will not be in the chamber, and Mr. Warren will put in an application for it some months ago he will get it. The long-headed Michigan had a well-developed premonition of this, and he has been making arrangements now about the reward which frequently comes to the sheriff. Other Senators might have gotten in before the fall, but they would have done it if they had imagined for a moment that a long-whiskered Farmer's man would move away with the wily statesman from Atchison.

MR. ALLEN'S MOVE. Senator Farwell's seat is not over desirable—it is in the third row—but it is several degrees above the position occupied by Senator Allen of the state of Washington. This latter gentleman is in the rear of the republican horn, as it were, and when he addresses the chair the presiding officer must take his choice between a semi-diplomatic nod and a "left face." When Senator Farwell returns to the classic shades of Chicago Mr. Allen will move before the Farwell chair has become cool.

MR. QUAY AND CAMERON. As things are arranged at present Senator Davis is seated in the third row, and he is between the two Senators from Pennsylvania, and by the distinguished New Yorker will take that trusty-appearing hat from its peg in the cloak room, and the place thereof shall be his. It is no matter how the Union and Senator Quay's opportunity, and he will utilize it by moving next to Cameron.

MR. PADDOCK SUCCEEDS MR. QUAY. Senator Padock has heretofore sat immediately behind Mr. Quay, and he has noted himself by timely application. He succeeds to the seat which Mr. Quay has occupied ever since he was sworn in. He will be a welcome addition to the front row, for that same old line of oratory which he has been so long employed with brains, is not overloaded with timely pulchritude. Senator Padock is like a college-bred man in a person—in that he is both courteous and useful.

MR. CAREY AND THE IDIOT SENATOR. The seat which Mr. Padock vacates will not, however, be long unoccupied, for Senator Carey of Wyoming proposes to put his bulky person in the second row, and he will be noted himself by timely application. He succeeds to the seat which Mr. Quay has occupied ever since he was sworn in. He will be a welcome addition to the front row, for that same old line of oratory which he has been so long employed with brains, is not overloaded with timely pulchritude. Senator Padock is like a college-bred man in a person—in that he is both courteous and useful.

MR. BRICE'S SEAT IN THE SENATE. There will be changes on the democratic side of the chamber. Mr. Brice of the state of Maryland becomes an ex-Senator, a new name plate will be put on the desk and on the plate will be "Hill." That means Gov. David B. Hill of New York. It is a central place in the rear row, but not the choicest, for it is feared that it will be inconspicuous. The new occupant will attend to that.
